SSU residence halls undergo changes

by Ali Moyer, staff writer

Beginning with the fall 1994 semester there will be some major changes in the SSU residence halls.

Severn Hall and Manokin Hall will both be designated as smoke free dorms. The results of a survey conducted by the Residence Hall Council (RHC) this fall indicated that over 55 percent of the residents polled would like to live in a smoke free dorm.

Kathy Grout, director of housing, said, "It is a good idea. Students have reactions to passive smoke. It was a request of the students."

"We chose Severn due to the way it is designed," said Grout.

The ventilation system in Severn is designed so that the air leaving one room through a vent travels through the building and into other rooms. Therefore, even if no one smokes in your cluster, you still receive second hand smoke from other rooms.

One resident of Severn agrees with the new policy. "It's about time," she said.

As an argument against the policy, sophomore Jon Bevilacqua said, "It is not fair if they place a smoker in the dorm and it is not their first choice."

When students become residents of one of the two smoke free buildings, they make an agreement that they and their guests will not smoke in or around the outside of the building.

Smoking will be prohibited in and around Severn Hall.

If a student breaks the agreement they will possibly be offered a change of residence.

The new policy is on a trial basis. "The options remain open as to whether or not more dorms will be converted to smoke free dorms," said Grout.

This change was announced to students in their housing contract and in an additional letter sent out to students.

Another housing change is that phones will no longer be (continued on page 2)

Students impact UMS policies

by George V. McGowan and Michael F. Seelman

Tuition, investments in South Africa, room and board fees... these are just a few of the topics that have been discussed at meetings of the University of Maryland System Board of Regents this academic year. Like so many of the issues considered and voted on by the board, these issues directly affect students. Unfortunately, too many students are not aware of the most effective ways to share their views and concerns with those that set System policy. How can students have more impact on the decisions and decision-makers?

First, it is important to understand the University of Maryland System. You and your college or university are part of a larger family of higher education institutions. The University of Maryland System (UMS) is an education powerhouse of 13 institutions--11 colleges and universities and two research institutions. The 11 campuses are Bowie State University, Coppin State College, Frostburg State University, Salisbury State University, Towson State University, University of Baltimore, University of Maryland at Baltimore, University of Maryland Baltimore County, University of Maryland College Park, University of Maryland Eastern Shore, and University of Maryland University College.

The two research institutions are the Center for Environmental and Estuarine Studies and the University of Maryland Biotechnology Institute.

National Service Day is celebrated

by MaryBeth Vanston, staff writer

April 19, 1994 is the seventh annual National Youth Service Day. This day is designated to celebrate the contributions that young people have made to society, to honor the youths who serve their communities, to raise public awareness of the benefits of youth service and to teach communities to consider young people as community resources, not problems.

Although the news is often filled with stories about young people who have gone astray, there are many others who aren't acknowledged that are working for a better and brighter future for not only themselves, but for their communities.

These young people are volunteering to help fight against community problems that include drugs, illiteracy and homelessness.

National Youth Service Day began in 1988 as a project of Youth Service America

(YSA) with the Campus Outreach Opportunity League. YSA is a non-profit organization that promotes and supports the development of a national network of youth service programs and organizations, through a variety of projects, technical assistance and advocacy.

Youth Service America's ultimate goal is to ensure that every young person in America has the opportunity to serve in a quality program in accordance with President Bill Clinton's national service initiative.

In September 1993, President Clinton signed the National and Community Service Trust Act into law with the intent of strengthening and expanding service and educational opportunities for all Americans.

The act enables states to meet the needs of their communities, pay for the education of their young people, and restore citizens' confidence in government's ability to work.

According to Marian Wright Edelman, author of The Measure of Our Success: A Letter to My Children and Yours, "Diverse opportunities for young people to serve their communities can play a major role in restoring hope and moral example to our nation."

"Young people need to believe they are needed and adults need to be reminded that our children and youth all have something to contribute and are precious resources to be nurtured and cherished."

"The development of youth service programs across the country reinforces both of these crucial messages, unleashing the creative energies of young people to combat some of our most pressing social problems."

Some of those pressing social problems that are of top concern to today's youth include: crime/violence, teenage pregnancy issues, gun control, environment, drug/alcohol abuse, education, homeless, domestic policy, AIDS/STDs and discrimination.

If these issues are of concern to you, then you may want to consider joining a local youth volunteer organization.

Radical environmentalist to lecture at SSU

by Garrett McGlothlin, staff writer

Imagine waking up to the sound of shouting and opening your eyes to a group of FBI agents pointing guns at you while you are still in bed. This is what Dave Foreman, co-founder of the radical environmental group Earth First!, awoke to one May morning in 1989.

Foreman, who is scheduled to speak at SSU this evening in the Wicomico Room of the University Center, has been called one of the most prominent and articulate advocates for preventing the destruction of Earth's remaining wild areas.

He has also been called a terrorist by the president of the National Wildlife Federation.

In 1989, Foreman was arrested on allegations that he led and paid for a sabotage operation to destroy the Central Arizona Project power lines, and that he conspired to sabotage electrical transmission towers at three Western nuclear power plants.

Foreman explained in an interview with People magazine in April 1990, "The FBI never got the message that I retired from the leadership role in Earth First! a year ago. They wanted to make an example of me."

Disgust with the slow pace of the environmental preservation movement led Foreman to join with four others in 1980 to form Earth First!.

The Earth First! motto is "No compromise in defense of Mother Earth!"

Why do they use so many exclamation points, you ask? This form of environmentalism is not a typical one, it is about getting involved, getting dirty and perhaps even risking your life.

During the 10 years that Foreman was in the leadership of Earth First!, there were frequent acts of sabotage and civil disobedience.

Tactics of the group included trespassing, blocking roads and chaining themselves to logging machinery.

Foreman has been arrested seven times, but has not spent any time in prison.

He seems to take his criticism in stride. "I consider myself a fairly conservative person," Foreman told People. "It's unfortunate to have to take these kinds of steps."

Foreman explained that the prescribed channels of environmental activism had not been effective.

After working for 18 months on a U.S. Forest Service survey of America's last wilderness areas, he sat powerlessly as the Wilderness Society agreed to the government's recommendation to open up 65 million of the 80 million remaining acres for logging and mining.

He said, "We had played the game properly- very rational, calm and factual. We got beat badly, the time for talking was over."

Foreman said, "What we got frustrated with was the co-opting environment of Washington, D.C. where we had to fit inside that political reality."

"We thought that the best way to change and expand political reality was to step outside the system and take a stronger stand."

Newsworthy activism has indeed expanded both environmental awareness and has made it an issue of greater political consideration.

Foreman left the leadership of Earth First! after 10 years, to serve as an advocate for conservation biology issues.

He is now Chairman of "The Wildlands Project," working to develop a North American wilderness recovery plan.

In his lecture, Foreman will discuss the massive changes that human beings are causing in the biosphere.

1776 newspaper donated

by John Cestone, staff writer

"It's not the oldest paper that we have," says Dr. Sylvia Bradley, gently turning the toast-brown page, "but it certainly has the most national relevance."

She is referring to a copy of the Pennsylvania Gazette dated July 10, 1776. The two page sand colored paper contains a reward for a runaway slave, and a copy of the Declaration of Independence only four days after it was adopted by the 13 colonies.

"The original vote passed 12-0 on July 2, but New York abstained. The colonies wanted the vote to be unanimous. They voted again on July 4, and got 13-0 to adopt the bill.

The historical document was donated by Rudolph Dolle, of Dolle's Candy in Ocean City.

"I bought the paper at an estate auction in Showell. I don't think I paid more than $85."

After that Mr. Dolle tossed the paper in a drawer and "pretty much forgot about it for about seven or eight years."

"Then one day I was talking to an employee of mine and he said he thought I might be authentic. So I took it to Dr. Bradley."

The paper is now in the Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture, protected from the elements.

"We're going to clean it and de-acidify it. After then we are going to display it."

provided to students with their rooms.

Stuart Aires, a Severn Hall resident said, "I think if you can use your own phone with all the same functions, it is fine."

All current services will continue to be provided.

John Morris, director of telecommunications said, "We cannot keep up with the repairs."

"A formal letter will be addressed to each student in the future concerning this situation," said Morris.

One last change concerns Wicomico, Pocomoke and Manokin Halls. The rooms on the third floor of these buildings will be converted to single rooms.

These rooms are too small in size to continue to house two students.

These floors will utilize the 24-hour quiet policy, similar to the policy in Dogwood Village.

"We define 24-hour quiet as 'the willingness of a resident to not allow music, visitors or personal activities to become loud. The resident should also control noise level so it does not spill into the hallway or other rooms," said Grout.

Students can impact UMS

13 institutions July 1, 1988 to enhance public higher education through greater sharing of resources and expertise. Though the System is still quite young, we can already point to several System benefits. For example, in the area of technology, all of the libraries in the System are linked via computer, making the collective holdings accessible to those within and outside the System. In addition, nearly all of us are linked by an interactive video network, extending the range of our teaching, research, and public services.

Other examples of UMS benefits are joint academic programs and other forms of inter-institutional academic cooperation, all of which are expanding to serve students better. In fact, two institutions-- Salisbury State University and University of Maryland Eastern Shore-- have adopted a common academic calendar that will allow students to benefit from inter-campus collaboration in a number of ways.

A 17-member Board of Regents guides and governs the System. Appointed by the governor, the regents are responsible for ensuring that resources are used efficiently and effectively. They also make decisions on a wide range of policies, including those dealing with academic programs, financial aid, and enrollment. In addition, they represent System concerns and interests to external constituencies such as the governor and his staff, The General Assembly, and the Maryland Higher Education Commission.

The board is directly supported by the System Administration staff, headed by Chancellor Donald N. Langenberg. System Administration coordinates leadership efforts, planning, and resource management system wide. The staff works with the institutions to help them accomplish their distinct missions and to encourage them to make optimal use of System resources.

Since the decisions of the Board of Regents and System Administration have such a major impact on the direction of every UMS institution, you as a student need to know the most effective channels for expressing your views. On the campus level, you can talk to your student government association leaders and your campus president.

On the System level, talk to the student regent or your representative on the UMS

Student Council (UMSSC). You can also reach the regents' office and System Administration by calling the chancellor's office at (301) 445-1901 in Adelphi.

To help ensure that the board and System Administration are responsive to students, we encourage students to make their voices heard. Student Regent Michael Seelman can be reached at (301) 314-9953 at the University of Maryland College Park. John Giannetti, Jr., chair of the UMSSC, can be reached at (410) 706-1712 at the University of Maryland at Baltimore. Let us hear from you.

George V. McGowan is chairman of the University of Maryland System Board of Regents. Michael F. Seelman is the student regent through June 30 and a senior at the University of Maryland College Park.

OPINION

Mystery Treats in the Dining Hall

On the evening of Sunday, April 10 I went to the dining hall, not unlike other students who live and eat on campus. When I checked the ice cream bin I saw an abundance of mystery treats intermingled with the usual cups of chocolate and vanilla. I decided to pick out one of these treats which was wrapped in aluminum foil.

The emotions which I was experiencing at this time were twofold: anxious trepidation and eager excitement. Perhaps I was holding in my hands one of the secrets of the Ruth Powell Dining Hall. I waited until I couldn't wait no more. I ripped the metallic sheet which enclosed the mystery treat. Immediately I was overcome with a great pang in the depths of my gut as I discovered the repulsive nature of this "new arrival". It seems that I had removed the mystery treat's silver lining only to be left with a grey cloud.

My eyes gazed upon two very familiar cookies between which a disturbingly familiar, yet frighteningly congealed was sandwiched. The cookies were branded with a leprechaun, which led me to the conclusion that they were purchased for St. Patrick's Day.

However, it was not the presence of these leprechaun cookies which disturbed me. It was the ominous green mass which caused me to lose my appetite. I had absolutely no idea what this stuff was.

I peeled the top cookie away from the green blob to get a better look. The green mass was triangular in shape and just over a half inch tall.

Suddenly I recognized the mysterious blob. I had seen it last semester. It was the infamous Christmas tree shaped ice cream. Everything made sense: the aluminum foil, the leprechaun cookies and the green mass. My conclusion was that the dining hall's management must have decided to make their own ice cream sandwiches using ice cream nobody liked and stale cookies. It all made perfect sense.

But now I am faced with three questions: 1) Why is the dining hall trying to pull the aluminum foil over my eyes?

2) Am I not supposed to remember the ever hated Christmas tree shaped ice cream? 3) And finally, am I now supposed to eat the Christmas tree shaped ice cream because it is put between two cookies which are themselves at least one month old?

Defenders of Salisbury

This letter is in response to Tony Magrone's whining. Apparently you are not from around here. Perhaps you are from a big city and don't understand the way things really work. These interesting odors you refer to are caused by people trying to make a living. Have you ever eaten a chicken Mr. Magrone? If you have then maybe you should learn to appreciate the work that goes into raising chickens. As for the fertilizer, that's part of agriculture. You see, things grow bigger and better through the application of said fertilizer. It takes a lot of work to operate the farm; maybe you should try to learn a little bit about farming so that you might appreciate it also.

I won't get into the "night life" aspect of your letter, because if you can't think of something better to do with your free time besides drinking then you're probably too lazy to have read past the first sentence of this letter. Oh, one last thing. If you don't like it here why don't you go home to mommy and daddy to fork out some more bucks and send your whining butt elsewhere!

Kevin Powell

Defenders of Salisbury II

Hey Tony Magrone - Boy did you stick your foot in your mouth, Tony. Was a gun put to your head as you were forced to come to Salisbury? You were also misinformed. I'm sorry that you had this grand illusion that Salisbury was such a party town. It's hard to believe that you might be here to get an education. Well, here's some mind-blasting news for you - Salisbury is a small, but growing, town that is full of history, but I'm sure you're not too interested huh? No, you want to hear about night life and how the police and politicians have such wild parties. Well, in the four years that I've lived in Salisbury I have not heard of, nor read of, any wild parties that the police or politicians have had. As a matter of fact, cops, most cops, come home and sleep - even on their days off. But you have amused me even further with your cancer facts. Here's a doozie for you- YOU CAN'T GET CANCER FROM SMELLING COW POOP OR CHICKEN CARCASSES!

If you are not happy here in Salisbury, go home. I admit, I was not so happy when I first moved here from a large city because the pace is different; it's slower. My intent was to come to SSU and learn the skills thus acquired. My goal has been reached and I am planning to live here for a while. I enjoy the locals because they are down-to-earth people who care about a lot of things. Salisbury is a bad place for you because you are making it that way.

So, in conclusion, grow up a little. There is nothing wrong with getting drunk with your friends if that is your desire, but in your letter you practically called it boring. I bet they love you for that. If you want excitement go back to the city, 'cause us local folks don't need none o' your kind 'round here.

Sincerely,

Mary Gross, a local

Defenders of Salisbury III

I would gamble to say that the majority of students that attend this university happen to be satisfied with what is offered here in Salisbury and on the lower Eastern Shore, where I have happily been a lifelong resident. Can I please remind you that Ocean City, which grows to become the second largest city in Maryland in the summer, happens to be on the lower Eastern Shore and about 5 million people from all over the eastern portion of the United States visited there last summer alone. Not bad for an outhouse, is it?

In response to your complaint that this college town, which has been so since 1925, "is one of the worse places a college student can live," I would like to know what it is like in other college towns. What do those students do for night life? At the colleges I have visited the students had parties, went to night clubs and socialized with each other. That seems similar to what goes on at boring old SSU! By the way, just for your information you can't watch ducks at night.

As for the smell of this part of the country it is very obvious to me that you have never been to a Friday night hog wrestling match here on the shore or else you would be used to the smell of a little organic fertilizer on our fields. I'd rather smell a little bit of manure in the spring than the smog or factory fumes of larger metropolitan areas on the east coast. At least in this part of the country a person can get in their car or on their bike for that fact, and get lost in the woods in less than ten minutes.

Now we must talk about the cancer rate of Maryland and Delaware. The way I look at it, how can the two states escape carcinogens? With drainage into the Chesapeake Bay from states such as New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, and storm systems that pass right over the Rustbelt and dump their pollutants on the east coast, we are a glutton for punishment. What about the number of retired folks who transplant their old bodies to this area to get away from all the things that you must desire. When they die of cancer (which they may have had when they came to the area), do the stats get attributed to the state that they moved from? No. They are added on to Maryland and Delaware's statistics.

As for the job situation here on the shore, all that I can say is that there are other opportunities for employment in the area besides plucking chickens.

Finally Mr. Magrone, I don't remember hearing anything about SSU forcing a student to attend this university, so why are you here? See ya! And don't let the cow kick you on the way out!

Rooming Blues

Once upon a time three roommates, Jamie, Beth and Michele entered Salisbury State University. In the beginning each came wondering if three girls could live together peacefully. To their surprise, not only did they become best of friends, they became sisters. They lived in a triple in Manokin Hall. But with all fairy tales there is always a villain; in this case SSU housing. Entering second semester the three learned that there are no triples in upperclassmen dorms, and they were informed that remaining in Manokin Hall was not an option.

How could three sisters choose between each other? Faced with the option of each splitting their own way, moving to Dogwood or moving off campus, the three chose to explore the third option.

By a stroke of luck, the three found a dream place with a reasonable cost that they could split. Well, as we all know, not all fairy tales end happily. The lease required all parents to co-sign and one roommate's parents refused.

Now, two days after the deposit guaranteeing on-campus housing was due, the three are in complete misery.

So, who was the idiot who decided to put triples in new student dorms, knowing full well that the three must split the following year? All three came to college not knowing what friendship to expect, and now finding the best one of their lives they have to say goodbye because housing is unwilling to allow them to be suitemates in St. Martin or cluster mates in any other upperclassmen building. In fact, housing will not even ensure that they can at least live in the same building.

As the fairy tale turned into a nightmare there is not only tension between the three, but many hurt feelings. The perpetrator behind this tremendous disaster is SSU Housing. Are they here only to take our money and disregard strong close friendships? Obviously. Thanks for nothing!

Sincerely,
Michele & Beth of Manokin Hall

Hostility in Ocean City

I read with interest Tony Magrone's recent criticism of the lower Eastern Shore. I feel that here is an additional thing to say about the lower Eastern Shore--namely, how people here can be so downright cruel to "outsiders."

Last summer, my girlfriend and I spent our first weekend in Ocean City. Sadly enough, it is most certain to be our last. The whole weekend was a disaster. However, the real tragedy occurred during what we now look back with disdain as "the McDonalds incident."

While having lunch one Saturday afternoon, several teenagers threw French fries and Chicken McNuggets at my girlfriend. When she told them to stop, they called her all types of horrible names.

We got up and complained to the manager (whom we later found out was the older brother of one of the teenagers). The manager defended the teenagers and claimed that my girlfriend was encouraging their behavior. I couldn't believe it! Tell me, why would someone encourage people to throw food at them?

We decided not to let the situation get the best of us, so we went to the beach for a few hours. We left my '76 Nova parked in the McDonald's parking lot. We saw it as a way of saving time looking for a parking space.

When we came back less than two hours later, the car was severely vandalized. It had two flat tires and a large gouge mark on the front driver's side fender (which later cost $400 to repair). It also had obscenities painted on it such as "pig" and "foreigner."

I later talked to an off-duty police officer about the event. He talked me out of filing a police report because such events are common with Ocean City youth who resent tourists in their town. He said that it wouldn't be worthwhile pursuing.

My question is this: Why would someone ever want to visit a place like the Eastern Shore when its people can be so downright vicious to "outsiders"?

Sincerely,
Tim Daleb

Suffering is not exclusive

Miss Rosen was right to point out that humanity must never forget the lessons of the Holocaust. And, as she also pointed out, the Jews were not alone in their suffering. However, they were not the first group to be singled out for genocide, as movies like Schindler's List and Holocaust Remembrance Week might lead persons to believe.

We must never forget, yet history seems to have forgotten the three million Armenians who were slaughtered under the Turkish regimes of the early 20th century and one of the greatest planned genocides ever--that of the American government against the Native American people.

Suffering is not exclusive.

Greenpiece: Wildlands Project

by Kate Spinner

Today, April 19, Dave Foreman will be visiting the Salisbury State University campus to give a lecture concerning the preservation of our wilderness.

Dave Foreman is the executive editor of Wild Earth magazine, chairperson of the Wildlands Project and co-founder of the Earth First! movement. He advocates uncompromising preservation efforts on a large scale in order to benefit nature first and suggests we allow ourselves an open and responsible attitude toward nature.

Industrialization, sprawling human development and overindulgent human habits threaten the lives of other creatures as well as ourselves. In an effort to really protect the wilderness and to allow more wilderness to grow, Dave Foreman and several other people associated with Wild Earth have developed the Wildlands Project.

The goal of the Wildlands

Project is to restore vast areas (much larger than our natural parks) of North American land to wilderness and to protect the wilderness that remains. The project would allow natural biodiversity and a reasonable amount of wild land so that animals can retain or regain their migration patterns without human interference.

The preserves would have buffers to protect the interior wilderness. Urbanization and industrialization could occur outside the buffer zone. The project demands an overall charge in the human concept of nature as a resource. If you would like a copy of the Wildlands Project call (602) 884-5106 and ask for Rod Mondt.

Dave Foreman is also the author of Confessions of an Eco Warrior and co-author of The Big Outside. He will be lecturing today at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center.

Alcohol & other drug survey

This survey is being administered by the Alcohol and Other Drug Policy/Guidelines Review committee. The purpose of this survey is to determine if the campus sponsors an adequate number of alternative programs to students other than drinking on the weekend nights. Additionally, the committee wants to understand student perceptions of the policy and its enforcement. The committee will forward the information gathered to the appropriate departments in order to better the campus's alternative programming. The results of the survey will be published in the Flyer so you can see how other students responded and how the information may be used in the future.

WHEN DRINKING, CALL A FRIEND. OR GET A RIDE WITH A STRANGER.

Drinking and riding can lead to a loss of license, a conviction, or even worse. That's if you're lucky. The fact is, 50% of motorcycle fatalities involve riders who have been drinking. So if you have been drinking, get a ride with a friend. It's the best call you can make. MOTORCYCLE SAFETY FOUNDATION

Have you ever been walking through the hallways in some of the buildings on campus and noticed mysterious, locked doors?

Do you ever wonder what is behind these secret doors? Well I know.

Recently I was led on a tour of rooms and places that SSU students never get to see. My tour guide for the afternoon was Vice President of Administration Joe Gilbert.

Along with Flyer photographer Pat Sesko, we set out to document these top secret areas on campus.

According to Gilbert, most of the places are off limits to students due to safety reasons. However, there are a couple of places where students can go.

The first stop on our mystery tour was the bell tower on top of Holloway Hall. Access was gained through one of those mystery doors mentioned earlier.

Once inside, it was time to climb lots of stairs. The first set of steps took us to the attic. It's dark, it's dusty and it's insulated.

There is a room off to one side of the walkway in the attic with more stairs. We climbed these stairs which lead up to another room and left us standing behind the clock faces.

There are four big clock faces made out of a heavy plastic material. Sorry, no wheels, springs or gears, it's electronic. This is also the storage area for all of the Christmas lights which decorate the tower.

We were then left with one more set of steps to climb in order to get outside. Mr. Gilbert figured out how to open the door with the attached weight system, and Sesko and I climbed out to take a look around.

The view was incredible, we could view Salisbury for miles. "I can see my house from up here," said Sesko.

We also managed to coincide our climb when the clocks were changing the time to 3 p.m., so we were deafened by the chime of the bells. Luckily it wasn't noon, or we probably would have lost out hearing permanently.

Just a reminder, places such as the bell tower are off limits to students! Not only is it illegal to go up there, (i.e. breaking and entering) it is also very dangerous. One student lost his life a few years ago attempting to climb up from the outside.

A place where students can visit is the courtyard near the business wing in Holloway Hall. Part of the fun is figuring out which door to use to get there.

This secret garden is quiet and beautiful. It has tulips and other flowers bordered by hedges resembling an English garden. It's the perfect place for quiet reading, contemplating life or sitting with someone special.

Mr. Gilbert suggested we visit a place where most students probably do not want to go, the office of President Bellevance.

Apparently Bellevance is so busy that he's hardly ever there either. But it is a great office.

It's probably about the size of three dorm rooms put together, and he has couches and easy chairs. He also has a desk that's big enough to serve Thanksgiving dinner to a family of 12.

His desk was a bit messy, but I'm sure he would have cleaned it if he knew we were coming.

As Mr. Gilbert led us to more places, I asked how he knew where everything was. "Well I've been here so long, I was involved in the building of most of the buildings," said Gilbert.

Next we visited the third

There is also a big computer which has every piece of writing you have sent to the university on file. This includes school records, bill payments and transcript material.

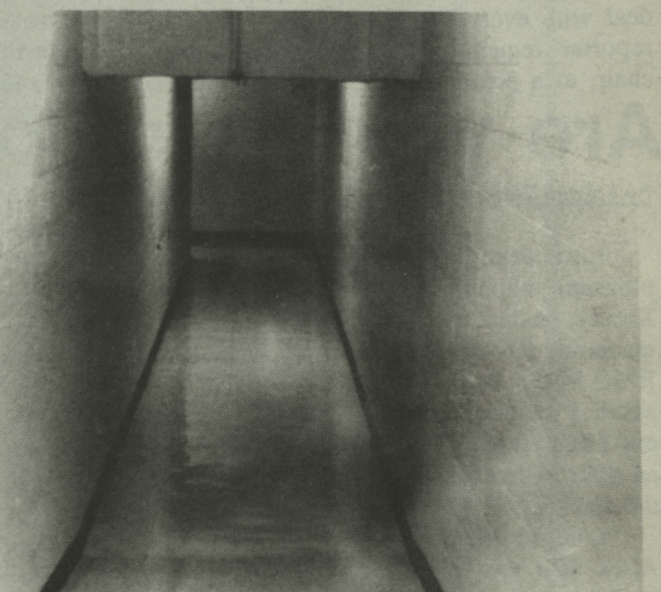

Did you know that there is a window underwater in the side of the pool in Maggs gym? We went there too. It's usually only used by coaches to watch swimmers during practice or tournaments.

The last place of interest was the third floor of the Guerreri University Center. This an area of particular interest to the Flyer staff because we always notice it during our staff meetings.

If you don't know what I am talking about, it is the open atrium area by the Book Rack. There are a lot of plants on the first floor, but if you look up, there is a big open area which extends up to what appears to be a third floor.

"Actually," says Gilbert, "it was built just to make people think that the University Center is bigger than it is." He also said that the state normally does not pay for structures that do not serve a purpose, but that since the building was built with private funds, they could build it whatever way they wanted.

Please remember that most

This hallway leads to a "secret place" in Fulton Hall of these places are behind locked doors for a reason. But it just goes to show that there is more to this campus than meets the eye.

Colley Cibber, Pfeiffer's top, comes alive

by Jim Hudson, staff writer

Last week Salisbury State treated audiences to the talents of Dr. T. Paul Pfeiffer, director of University theatre, in two performances of "An Apology for the Life of an Actor." The play took place April 15 and 16 in the television studio of Caruthers Hall.

The play was written by Dr. Pfeiffer himself. It chronicles the comedic backstage and back-stabbing world of English Restoration Theatre.

The one-man show relates the life of Colley Cibber, Esquire, one of the most famous personalities of the eighteenth century social scene. Cibber was born in London in 1671 and entered theatre against his father's wishes.

Cibber enjoyed success, talents as the fop Sir Novelty Fashion. Cibber's trademark became the portrayals of such

however, after his first play became a major hit. The play also showcased his acting for himself the title of "father of sentimental comedy." His success propelled him into the highest levels of English society. Cibber's cultivated good nature and social image soon allowed him to form close friendships with influential men including Lord Chesterfield, the most famous conversationalist of the age.

Perhaps the actor's crowning achievement came when the King appointed Cibber Poet Laureate of England in recognition of his skills and loyalty to the Hanoverian monarchy.

Not everyone shared such a high regard for his work, however. The poet and satirist Alexander Pope found him both foolish and false. Pope became Cibber's most staunch critic.

Critics such as Pope added a controversial side to Cibber's lifestyle. It is this lifestyle on which the performance focuses.

Pfeiffer says of his production, "The play recreates the feeling of life in London society at that time through the eyes of a very funny English actor. When he died in 1757 a remarkable period of English theatre history came to an end."

This performance marks an encore for Pfeiffer who first premiered the play here at SSU in the Spring of 1992. Union College in Cincinnati has also presented a shortened version of the play.

fops and fools. Due to his acting and play writing prowess Cibber won

Ron Howard's The Paper is worth six bucks

by John David Cestone, staff writer

In his most recent movie, The Paper, director Ron Howard delivers. He has finally harnessed the talent he showed in Parenthood, put away the gimmicky special effects of Backdraft and Willow and told a good people story.

The movie takes us through 24 hours in the life of Henry, the Metro Editor of the New York Sun. Henry, played by Michael Keaton, is a workaholic, Coca-Cola guzzling reporter who has to deal with everything from a reporter requesting a $600 chair, to a pregnant wife, to being scooped on the hottest story in town.

On top of all his other problems Henry suspects that a story The Sun is going to run might contain false information. He has five hours to fix it.

While The Paper seems to be a rehashed All The President's Men, it emerges as a much richer film.

Part of the reason for that is the screenplay written by David and Steven Koopp. The dialogue is snappy, clever and to the point. They take the characters near the edge, push them and watch them react.

Howard brings together a cast with more talent than is regularly seen in three feature films combined, and draws out their best work.

He lets the scenes grow from the characters naturally, so that his directorial influence is barely noticeable.

While Howard uses visual irony and cinematography well to reinforce the scenes, he cuts too quickly from person to person at dramatic moments, underscoring the effect. It looks as if he is showing off how many cameras he has to work with.

But, again, the cast more than makes up for that small glitch. The main characters in this movie, Glenn Close and Michael Keaton, spend most of their time fighting. Close plays Alicia, the managing editor with a personal vendetta against Henry, who just wants to find the truth.

They have a reserved hatred toward each other and what they are doing, which culminates in a hilariously real fight scene complete with a missed macing.

Two of the ensemble cast that stand out are Robert Duvall and Randy Quaid. Duvall plays Bernie, the editor who is uncomfortable with the role society has placed on him because of his age and position.

"One of the problems with being my age," Duvall's character says, "is that society looks to you to be a father figure, when in reality you're the same S.O.B. you always were." Duvall expresses reserved compassion while retaining the grandfatherly image that his character so desperately wants to escape.

Quaid, as MacDugle, a paranoid columnist who has taken on the parking division of the New York City government, however, is the character to watch. MacDugle has the insight to see into other character's motivation and desires and the ability to make people listen.

The strong cast, clever story and powerful direction make The Paper worth a second read.

Are your ears bored? Check out some new CD's

by Lauren Weis, staff writer

Last week I received a pleasant phone call from Kenny Allen, a college marketing representative from BMG Music distribution. He asked if we did music reviews and I said "sure" knowing that an offer of free music was in the making.

True to his word, Mr. Allen sent me "a bunch of stuff," including 10 brand new albums for my listening pleasure. I liked some of these albums so well that I decided to share them with all of you.

Many of you may have seen the motion picture Reality Bites, a film that from what I've heard wasn't as good as it looked. The soundtrack however is pretty dam good.

It includes songs by the likes of Lenny Kravitz, The Juliana Hatfield 3, U2, Crowded House, World Party, Dinosaur Jr, Squeeze and a bunch of other bands. If you decide to invest in this little number just be sure to skip track number 10. Ethan Hawke, one of the film's stars, tries to sing. Hawke, however should stick to acting.

Matthew Sweet's new release Son of Altered Beast

(a superdeformed production), proved to be a lot less weird than its title. Translation: I liked it. Four of the songs were recorded live at the Nightclub 9:30 in D.C. this January, a show which the ever-roving Flyer reporter Garrett is rumored to have attended.

In a style reminiscent of Tori Amos, Canadian native Sarah McLachlan wowed me with her fiery voice on Fumbling Towards Ecstasy, released in January by Arista records. McLachlan has recorded "Hold On," track nine on Fumbling, on the No

Alternative compilation - the proceeds of which will benefit AIDS relief.

Speaking of compilations, Alternatives, a sampling of, you guesses it "alternative" bands proved to be kind of interesting. It includes songs by The Smithereens, Cowboy Junkies, the Gigolo Aunts, El Magnifico, Fury in the Slaughterhouse and 700 Miles.

I particularly liked The Post, a song written by J. Mascis of Dinosaur Jr. and recorded by the Cowboy Junkies. It was released on their latest album Pale Sun, Crescent Moon and combines the smooth, mellow sound of the Cowboy Junkies with the powerful guitar lines typical of Mascis.

My "CD Sampler" also included Weight, the upcoming Rollins Band release. The album, available in stores as of April 12, is loud and powerful, in the aggressive style of Henry Rollins.

I'd tell you more about it, but I only listened to it once, because my friend Moe borrowed it. She liked it so much that she didn't want to give it back. The Rollins Band will be playing the WHFS-tival on May 14 at RFK in Washington, D.C.

Phone Survey: Dunkin' Donuts is where it's at

by Janet Scouten, staff call girl

Dunkin' Donuts: we love it, we crave it, it is essential to our very existence.

It is a beautiful mecca to our civilization, beckoning us with its yummy doughnuts and amazing coffee.

Yet, strange as it may seem, there was actually a period in my life when the sight of that familiar pink and orange Dunkin' Donuts sign filled me with terror.

You see, as a very young child I had this nasty nightmare involving (ack!) Dunkin' Donuts.

In the dream, my parents, my brother and I were making a cross-country car trip. Along the way we stopped at a Dunkin' Donuts.

I was very excited to be there. While my parents were picking out the doughnuts, I happily occupied myself by seeing how fast I could spin around and around on one of the pink swivel stools.

driving away ... sniff, sniff.

Anyway, this week's phone survey pertains to none other than, you guessed it, Dunkin' Donuts.

This week's questions:

A: "What is your favorite variety of the Dunkin' Donut?"

B: "What is your most unusual Dunkin' Donut experience?"

(a) "Boston Kreme." (This is the official Dunkin' Donuts spelling of "cream.")

Well, I must have been pretty absorbed with my spinning, because when I stopped and looked up my parents and my brother were

(b) "There were about 17 cops there-- the myth is true." -James Rendiero

(a) "Plain with chocolate topping on it."

(b) "Me and two of my friends were eating our doughnuts on the curb around 11 pm. This drunk old guy (must have been 110) came up to us and slurred, 'Hey ladies, how are you this evening?'"

"I was pretty scared."

-Karen Sears

DUNKIN' DONUTS®

(a) "Blueberry oat bran muffins."

(b) "I backed into a big trash can and knocked it over. Everyone in the place got real quiet and looked at me."

-Elizabeth Grant

(a) "Chocolate with chocolate jimmies. But they don't have it at this Dunkin' Donuts. So when I ask for it and they say they don't have it, I always say 'Well, then I don't want anything.'"

(b) "I went to Dunkin' Donuts at four in the morning and saw two people I knew there. Isn't that wierd?"

-Pamela Rosen

(a) "Chocolate Kreme Filled." (b) "Me and my friend used to go to Dunkin' Donuts all the time, about two times a week."

"We made friends with a waiter there and his name was Brian. One time we walked by the store on our way to some place else and he bolted out (like a bat out of hell) and said, 'Guys, guys why didn't you stop in and wave?'"

-Summer Blais

According to a Dunkin' Donuts waitress, the most popular variety of doughnut in Salisbury is Chocolate Frosted.

Investigate a Eurail pass for summer travel

Travel is guaranteed to change your perspectives, especially if you make an effort to open up to the new surrounds. So if you're traveling to Southern California, simply grow a pony tail, put on a bolo tie and a pair of lizard skin boots, and go in hock for a BMW. And if you're heading to Europe, use your hands a lot in conversation, cultivate a certain air of ennui, and by all means get a Eurail pass.

A Eurail pass? That's right. For whatever reason (sociability, ecological awareness, whatever) Europeans love trains. And for reasons we'll get into in a moment, so do savvy travelers. What's more, unlike their graffiti-ridden counterparts in America, trains in Europe go almost everywhere you want to go.

Now stop for a second and picture yourself rolling down the Rhone valley, with the familiar train noises tapping a lulling backbeat, sunlit mountains rearing on the other side of the window, a baguette and cheese on the table, and perhaps a new friend joining you for lunch.

And in case you needed any more convincing, picture yourself at the wheel of a rental Fiat costing $500 a week and guzzling gas that costs $3.50 per gallon. It gets seriously hot without air conditioning, and you're starting to wonder if you're going to make it to the bathrooms in the next city. Oh, and did we mention the tolls?

In pleasant contrast, a Eurail pass will cost you between $10 and $30 per day, as you ride in air-conditioned comfort on trains that make up the world's most modern fleet. In Europe, trains are held to strict standards of speed, punctuality, and comfort. After a European train trip, that sneaking feeling of American superiority that you may have been secretly harboring will definitely be shaken.

There are a few caveats, however. Remember, these are working trains, so be ready at the exit door for transfers, don't wander away from the train at stops, and take some time to plan your itinerary before you climb aboard. Make reservations early for peak season travel. And make sure you don't over-pack-- two packs per person, maximum, and bring your own food and water. Train food in Europe is expensive, and train water can be scary.

Eurail passes come with a wide variety of durations and options, to suit any kind of trip. But to get the most out of a European trip, you might want to plan on spending at least three weeks, travel by day to see the countryside and meet other travelers, and give yourself plenty of time at key destinations.

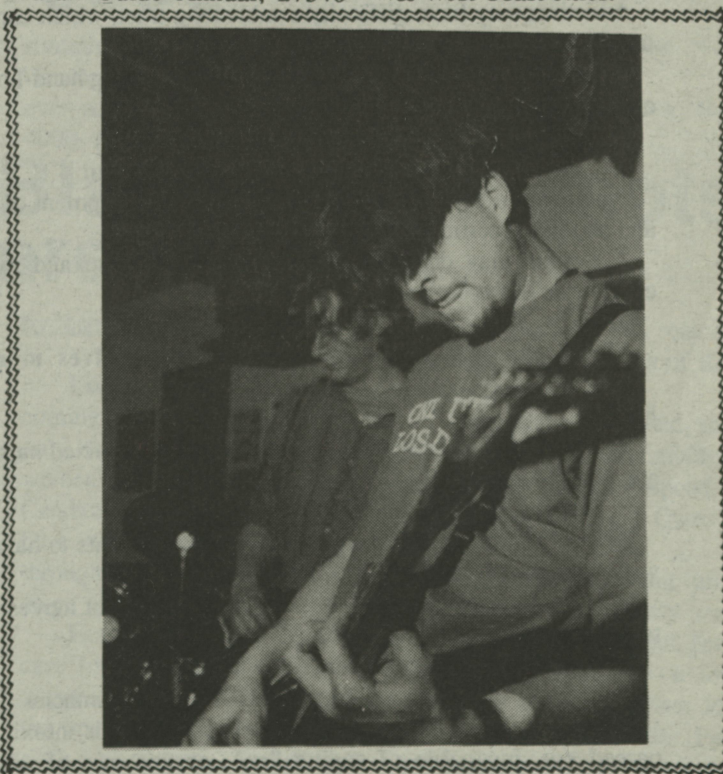

One of the best ways to get your Eurail pass is through STA Travel. With over 100 offices worldwide, they're the world's largest organization catering to independent and student travelers. Along with Eurail passes, STA is a great source for discount airfare, international student and youth ID cards, and American Youth Hostel memberships. STA Travel consultants are experienced travelers who can easily help you get the right Eurail pass for your trip.

One of the best sources of information about travel by train in Europe or anywhere else for that matter is the Eurail Guide, a popular book now in its twenty-fourth edition. It's published by Eurail Guide Annual, 27540

Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu, CA 90265.

You can reach STA Travel at 1-800-777-0112, or visit one of their branches in major East & West Coast cities.

Environmental Issues Lecture

On Monday, April 18, at 7 pm Dr. Edward L. Rhodes discusses "Environmental Justice: New Challenges at the National and Local Levels." His talk is in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. Admission is free and the public is invited.

Rhodes is well-qualified to speak on environmental issues and social policy. He is a visiting scholar at the Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Environmental Justice in Washington, D.C. He also is senior fellow at George Mason University's Institute of Public Policy and on faculty at the School of Public Environmental Affairs at Indiana University in Bloomington.

Rhodes points out that the potential risks to minority communities take several forms, including the increased likelihood of living closer to hazardous material disposal and treatment facilities and enduring a greater chance of exposure to environmental hazards such as lead poisoning.

Regardless of historical reasons, "the fact remains that minority communities will probably continue to face exposure to increased risk," said Rhodes. What may be the most important issue to explore is what policy guidelines or steps can be taken to ensure that future decision-making is as equitable as possible and what minority and economically depressed communities can do to protect themselves.

"HEALTH NOTES"

by Joy Marowski and Linda Lombardi

Think of four of your friends... one of them may become a victim of rape.

National statistics show...

- * 1 in 4 college women have experienced rape or attempted rape since age 14
- * 9 in 10 date rapes are not reported
- * 1 in 12 college men admits to acts that meet legal definitions of rape, even though few of these men identify themselves as rapists
- * 7 out of 10 rapes are by men the women know
- * 55% of perpetrators and 53% of victims said they were under the influence of alcohol during the assault

How does rape affect someone?

- * victims may have difficulty establishing trust, which can lead to communication problems
- * they may have a fear of being touched, including hand-holding and hugging
- * they may feel a strong need to get away
- * dreams or nightmares are another major symptom
- * a common psychological defense is the development of fears and phobias specific to the circumstances of the rape
- * victims may develop an impaired self-esteem and loss of confidence in themselves

How can men and women make themselves more aware?

MEN:

- 1) Listen carefully. If you feel you are getting a mixed message, ask. Don't assume.
- 2) Remember-- date rape is a crime.
- 3) Don't automatically assume that a woman wants to have sex with you just because...
  - she drinks heavily, dresses provocatively, or agrees to go to your room
  - she has had sex with you in the past
  - she consents to kissing or other sexual intimacies
- 4) Be aware that having sex with someone who is intoxicated, passed out, incapable of saying "no", or unaware of what is happening may be considered rape

WOMEN:

- 1) Know your sexual intentions and limits.
- 2) Communicate your limits firmly and directly.

- 3) Listen to your gut feelings.
- 4) Do not be afraid to "make wave" if you feel threatened. Don't hesitate to state your feelings and get out of the situation.
- 5) Look out for one another, and stick with people you know you can trust.

What to do if you or a friend are raped:

- YOU:
- Go to a safe place (home, a friend's home).
  - Call someone to be with you.
  - Call your RA, RD, AD, or Campus Police (who will in turn contact the necessary people).
  - Do not change your clothes, shower, or bathe.
  - obtain medical attention.
  - Have someone write down as much as you can remember about the situation.
  - Be sure to seek the support that you need.

HOW TO HELP THE VICTIM

- Be a good listener.
- Assist her in getting help, but remember that the decisions are up to her.
- Try to minimize the number of times the victim must tell the story.
- Assure her that it was not her fault.
- Help her understand that this will cause a disruption in her life, but she will recover.
- DO NOT... tell her what you would have done ask her why she didn't scream or fight prevent her from talking about it if she wants to ask her if she did anything to lead him on
- DO be supportive and let her know that you are someone she can confide in and trust.

Both men & women should be especially careful when alcohol & drugs are involved. They can interfere with your ability to judge situations and to communicate effectively. Finally, know that the choices you make about sex are your own. Any questions or comments?

Women's lacrosse chills Frostburg, 8-5

by Joe Herman, staff writer

After a disappointing loss to Rowan College last Tuesday, the Salisbury State women's lacrosse team bounced back by crushing rival Frostburg State by an 8-5 count last Saturday.

The win increased Salisbury's record to 6-3 on the year while Frostburg dropped to 4-2. "Frostburg has always been our rival and it's been quite a few years since we've beaten them," said head coach Dawn Chamberlin. "Today we broke that tradition."

SSU, now ranked sixth in the nation in NCAA Division III lacrosse, has to win their last three games for playoff consideration. "We knew we had to win this game and we really pulled together in the second half," said junior co-captain Crissy Fellona. "Hopefully we can use this game as a stepping stone for the playoffs."

Freshman goalie Shawna Block put in a stellar performance as she made 21 saves compared to only 10 by FSU goalie Laura Becker.

"Shawna had a phenomenal game today," said Chamberlin. "This was definitely her best game since she's been here."

Fellona led the attack with three goals while freshman Susan Fatz and senior co-captain Jenny Shelley added two goals apiece. "We did have a few low moments, but we never let down and we were able to score the goals when we needed them," added Chamberlin.

At the end of the first half, Frostburg had the momentum as they came back from a two goal deficit to tie the game 4-4. However, the momentum quickly swayed to the Sea Gull bench as junior Amy Burkhardt assisted Fellona to put SSU up by a score of 5-4.

Although Frostburg had a number of opportunities, Salisbury's aggressive defense and goalie Shawna Block stymied FSU's attack every time.

Just when it seemed like Frostburg had thrown in the towel, sophomore Erin Eaton picked up a loose ball in front of the net for an easy score, decreasing the margin to 6-5.

Then, with six minutes remaining in the game, FSU's Julie Langlois raced down the field for what appeared to be the tying goal, but Block came up with a big stick save to keep SSU on top.

Finally, with five minutes remaining, freshman Candice Blanchette gave SSU the insurance they needed as her shot beat Becker to give Salisbury the 7-5 lead. Then Fellona put the game away with her third goal as SSU held on for the 8-5 victory.

Although Salisbury only outshot FSU by three (33-30), many of those shots were weak shots due to the relentless and aggressive defense that SSU exhibited. "We had good connections at midfield and our defense really pulled it together today," added junior Catina Campbell.

For playoff consideration, SSU must win their next three games, all of which are away. "We just have to come out and play hard," said Chamberlin. "We can't let down like we did against Rowan. There's no room for error."

Jim Berkman leads SSU lacrosse

by Mike Beardslee, staff writer

Most people here at Salisbury State probably know that Jim Berkman is the head coach of the men's lacrosse team, and that under his guidance they are having one of their finest seasons, going undefeated in their first ten games.

But not many people know that Berkman, who at department and good recruiting. Several of the coaches are former players, such as Berkman's nephew, Rick Berkman, a former All-American and one of the players who played on the 1991 Finalist team. Jim Berkman said, "We've been fortunate to have other players stick around and help out. Without them we wouldn't be close to where we are."

"This is probably the strongest offensive team overall that I've ever coached."

---Men's lacrosse coach Jim Berkman

Berkman is no stranger to athletics. He played lacrosse at St. Lawrence University, New York, and was named a second-team All-American. He also played basketball, earning MVP honors his junior and senior year.

He graduated from St. Lawrence in '82 and came to Salisbury to pursue his masters. During his two year stay he assisted Hank Janczyk, the former head lacrosse coach, and spent some time as assistant coach for Ward Lambert, the head coach of men's basketball.

When Berkman graduated he was offered a job as head coach of the lacrosse team at Potsdam, and he jumped at the chance. "I was lucky; they don't usually hire head coaches as young as I was."

However, Berkman would not stay at Potsdam long. A few years later he was asked to come back to Salisbury and take over the reins of the men's lacrosse program. In his first year he posted a 9-5 record and led the team to the NCAA quarterfinals.

In 1990 they went to the semifinals, and a year later the men's lacrosse team went all the way to the big one; the championship game against Hobart. SSU lost, but Berkman said that it's something he'll never forget. "It was like no other game I've ever seen. There were over 4000 people all around the stadium. The noise was deafening."

Blanchette's shots are on goal

by Josh LeBaron, staff writer

Like most freshman coming into their first season on the collegiate level, women's lacrosse player Candice Blanchette expected to have to work her way up through the ranks and fight for some playing time.

However, such is not the case for Blanchette. She has stepped up to become one of the key players on this year's sixth-ranked team. In fact she leads the team in goals with 20, and points with 24.

Blanchette, a freshman from South Carrol High School in Sykesville, Maryland has blended in to a team that was not expecting anything great for this season, especially after the loss of star Flossy Owens.

Owens was redshirted, and will regain a year of eligibility, and Blanchette has responded by stepping up to fill Owens' shoes.

She said, "Coming into SSU I knew that Flossy was the player. When I got here she really helped me a lot. When we all got together for fall ball, she made me feel comfortable with everyone. Because of that, I felt safe on the field with everyone."

SSU suffered with the loss of Owens. Blanchette said, "We lost against Hopkins in our first game without her. (continued on page 16)

Jonathan Joines a hit for SSU baseball

by Joe Herman, staff writer

In major league baseball only an elite few have ever maintained a .400 batting average over an entire season. Although college is far from the big leagues, if senior designated hitter Jonathan Joines finishes this year at a .400 clip (currently .408), it will be his third consecutive .400 or better season.

Joines transferred to Salisbury after fulfilling his two years of eligibility at Delaware Technical Community College in Georgetown. At Del. Tech., Joines batted .440 last year and .432 the year before and was named an All-American both seasons.

Although this is only his third season, Joines is a senior because he lost a year of eligibility by attending the University of Delaware his freshman year.

Since Joines still had a year of eligibility remaining, found his niche. "Already knowing Brian (Hollamon) has made it easier to meet a lot of the players," added Joines. "I really love it here, it's a good program."

Due to a number of

"As a team we definitely rely on him for his consistency."

---Baseball head coach Dean Deshon

high school teammate Brian Hollamon convinced him to transfer to SSU. "Coach Deshon called me and asked me to try out," said Joines. "I was recruited by other schools but SSU was the only school that had my major (respiratory therapy)."

In only his first year at SSU, Joines seems to have injuries this year, Joines has been a pleasant addition for head coach Dean Deshon. "He's had a hit in almost every ballgame. As a team we definitely rely on him for his consistency," said Deshon.

It may seem as if Joines is simply a natural at the plate, but things haven't always come this easy for him. "In high school I really didn't play as much as I think I should have due to a lot of politics," said Joines. "Since then I've always worked hard to prove that I really do have the talent to be a good ballplayer."

Ironically enough, one of Joines' goals this season is to do better at the plate. "I've hit the ball hard; I just haven't been getting the base hits that I should," said Joines. "Since this is my last season, I'd like to get my average up so I can be an All-American candidate."

As a team, Joines would like to finish the season above .500. "Team-wise we're coming along. We've won six of our last seven games," added Joines. "If we have a winning season, more players will come here, which will help build the program next year."

Berkman leads SSU

year's team compares with the Finalist squad of '91, Berkman said, "There are a lot of similarities. That team had a great attack that had played together for several years; this year's attack has that potential, but we're not quite there. This team has better offensive middlefielders than the '91 unit. This is probably the strongest offensive team overall that I've ever coached."

Preparing his players psychologically, says Berkman, is often the hardest job. "It's difficult to motivate for the easy teams. Because our bench is so deep, the practices are sometimes harder than the games."

Berkman seems to like it that way, however. "I want them to play hard. We want kids who have a desire to get better."

"For me, athletics isn't just winning. It's about the process of discipline, of teamwork and sportsmanship. What we learn carries over into daily life."

Berkman says that he first became interested in coaching in high school. "I had a great high school basketball coach. I liked the things he did, and of course I've always loved sports and loved to compete. This just seemed to be the best avenue to share my abilities in the coaching and teaching profession."

Nor is he content to limit himself to lacrosse. He is slated to coach the women's soccer team, which will turn varsity this fall. He is also the co-director as well as a participant in the Coors-Light Triathlon, a coach for YMCA basketball and indoor soccer, a Salvation Army baseball coach, and he's helping to start up a youth lacrosse club in the Salisbury area as part of the Beach Lacrosse Association.

When Berkman isn't involved in one of his many activities, he can be found at home with his wife, Jenny, who is the director of Health Services for SSU and a native of Cambridge. They have two children; Kylor, 7, and Keli, 3.

Gado throws 134.9 feet, qualifies for nationals

by Jen Mudd, staff writer

The Salisbury State track and field team opened their season with the Battleground Relays on March 25 in Fredericksburg, Virginia. This season opener proved to be quite a memorable one for freshman Stacie Gado.

In her first throw of the meet and the season, Gado hurled the javelin 134.9 feet. Her throw qualified her for this year's Nationals, which will be held the week of May 23 in Chicago, Illinois.

Gado, who is from Franklin, New Jersey, is no stranger to success. While attending Wallkill Valley High, Gado excelled in field hockey, swimming, and track and field. She received all-area, all-West Jersey and all-league honors for swimming and field hockey and received every possible honor for track and field.

Gado was New Jersey State Champion her senior year of high school. She won States with a throw of 141.6 feet, only three feet away from the state record.

Gado now holds the javelin record and the 100 meter breast stroke record for Wallkill Valley High.

Gado began throwing the shot put, discus and javelin her sophomore year of high school only after her chemistry teacher asked her to.

"I started out as a distance runner to stay in shape for field hockey," Gado said. "My chemistry teacher, who was also the track coach, wanted me to try throwing because I was a swimmer and swimmers have strong shoulders which is good for throwing."

Gado's personal goals for the season are to attempt to break the SSU school records in both the discus and javelin.

"I want to do the best that I can, not only for myself, but for the whole team," Gado said. "I think that I can score some points and help us win some meets."

On Saturday, April 16 at the Cardinal Classic held in Washington D.C. at Catholic University, Gado captured a first place finish in the javelin, second place in the shot put and third place in the discus. Her first place finish in the javelin with a throw of 118' 8" set a new Cardinal Classic meet record. Gado also set a new personal best in the shot put with a throw of 35' 10", which was almost two feet further than her previous best.

Gado, who is a Spanish/secondary education major, plans to spend a semester studying in Spain, which means she will either miss a season of field hockey or a season of track and field.

Upon graduation, Gado plans to attend graduate school to earn a masters in education. She also plans to coach either high school field hockey, swimming, or track and field.

Gull Takes Baseball

The SSU baseball team improved their record to 9-8 after defeating Washington College 7-6 on Sunday, April 10. Mike Franklin scored on Jerry Nicklow's ground out in the top of the ninth to win the game. Pitcher Pat Fachel (4-1) recorded the win.

Softball

Chowan College downed Salisbury in both ends of a double header, 4-0 and 11-7 on Sunday, April 10. Diane Racine went 4-for-4 and scored three times for SSU in the second game. Shannon Ciannelli went 2-for-3 and Michelle Brosius went 2-for-4.

On Tuesday, April 12, the S.S.U. women defeated Eastern Mennonite in both games of a double header, 3-2 and 7-2. Tracy Layfield (5-4) pitched a complete game six-hitter in the first game. In game two, Diane Racine, Becky Keller and Kara Burman had two hits each. Traci Coleman pitched a complete game five-hitter for the win.

Women's Lacrosse

The SSU women lost to Rowan College 12-10 on Tuesday, April 12. Candice Blachette and Renee Kretkowski scored three goals each. Crissy Fellona and Nicole Clark added two goals apiece. Shawna Block recorded 19 saves.

Men's Lacrosse

The SSU men downed St. Mary's College 23-3 on Tuesday, April 12. Sean Radenbaugh netted seven goals and had three assists. Pauly Smith recorded four goals and one assist. Jason Coffman scored three goals, Dan Mergott scored twice and Mike Orton had five assists.

Track and Field

On Saturday, April 16 the SSU track and field team competed in the Cardinal Classic at Catholic University in Washington, D.C. The men took first in the meet and the women placed third. In the 10,000 meter run Rob Freshwater and Mary Puderbaugh placed third. Brian Evans placed first in the shot put and discus. Dan Quinn placed fourth in the shot put. Stacy Gado placed first in the javelin, setting a new Cardinal Classic record. Gado also placed second in the shot put and third in the discus. Amy Fleiner finished second in the javelin. Heather Jones placed fourth in the discus. In the long jump, Kirsten Owens placed first in the women's competition and Tony McCray placed second in the men's competition. McCray also captured a first place finish in the 100 meter. Ed Houck finished third in the men's triple jump. Other results were too late to be included in this edition.

Men's tennis defeats Catholic, 9-0

by Josh LeBaron, staff writer

With the Capital Athletic Conference tournament only two days away, the Salisbury State University men's tennis team faced Catholic University in a tune-up match on April 14.

SSU came away with another sweep, beating Catholic 9-0.

With head coach Dean Burroughs out of town, assistant Ken Soliday was in charge of the club for the day.

SSU got off to a good start as #1 singles player Brian Weist beat Juan Carlos Barraza, 6-2, 2-6, 7-5. Mark Terrell cruised to a victory at #2 singles, beating Sandon Nixon, 6-1, 6-4.

Mike Daw beat Andrew Edwards at #3 singles by a score of 6-0, 6-3. Matt Salisbury beat Vong Soo Hallel, 6-2, 6-3 at #4 singles and Bobby August was victorious at #5, beating Mel Schwing, 6-1, 6-1. At #6 singles, Ben Gibson was victorious on a Catholic default.

The match was won before doubles even started, but the teams played pro-set doubles to finish the match.

Weist and Daw beat Barraza and Nixon 8-2 in a pro-set. Terrell and Matt Salisbury won by the same score at #2 doubles, beating Edwards and Hallel.

This win over Catholic boosted SSU's record to 8-3 and served as a confidence builder going into the tournament.

Soliday said, "The tournament will most likely come down to Mary Washington and us."

SSU lost to Mary Washington on April 7, but Soliday and the team seemed pretty confident about their chances. "We've played a few matches since we lost to them (Mary Washington), and we have definitely gotten much stronger since then."

The tournament ended on Sunday. The results will be printed in next week's edition of the Flyer.

Blanchette stars for women's lacrosse

There was definitely some pressure without her on the field. We had changed our game plan up a little, but coach Chamberlin knows as well as us that one person does not make the whole team."

One of the reasons that the team is doing so well could be the camaraderie of the players. "The whole team is good friends. No one is playing for themselves. Also, coach Chamberlin doesn't pick favorites, and she doesn't look to just one person to get things done."

I asked Candice what she envisioned for the rest of her career at SSU and she seemed to be, as she said, "Already looking forward to it." She said, "Flossy is going to be back for another year. We are losing three players, including Jen Shelley who anchors the defense. I think our attack will be stronger than ever, and we have some people who can step in and play defense."

As the women's lacrosse team continues to do well, Candice Blanchette is going to be a name that sticks around for a while. The women have potential, and are going to join the men's team as a powerhouse in Division III for some years to come.

Reminder:
Any team that wishes to have results published in the Flyer must report them to the Sports Desk no later than 5:00 Saturday.

This year's topic is "The Ethics of Justice vs. the Ethics of Care" with Dr. Frank Ambrosia from Georgetown University and Dr. Jay Kroeger-Mappes from Frostburg State University. This is free and open to all SSU faculty, staff, students and their guests. Refreshments will be provided.

IN DEFENSE OF THE WILD

"The naturalist Aldo Leopold said there are those who can live without wild things and those who cannot. I am one of those who cannot. I'm a product of the Pleistocene epoch...I do not want to live in a world without jaguars and great blue whales and redwoods and rain forests, because this is my geological era, this is my family, this is my context. I only have meaning in situ, in the age I live in, in the late Pleistocene. I do not want to be the cause of a transition into a new era."

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

The time has come... seventh of May in the nineteen hundredth and ninety fourth year we will commemorate the coming of our brother Paddy Murphy. Invitations will be diligently given to those who are most deserving of being in the presence of the man himself, MURF!

Be alert! The brothers, alumni, and distinguished guests of Sigma Alpha Epsilon will be attending the look at Feet" Mayse, and Yancy "Biscuit" Lowe! You are about to embark on a grand journey that will last the rest of your lives.

The TKE softball team continues to do well, who knew. Thanks to Sig Tau, Zeta and Phi Mu for the great 4-way to help induct our new guys. Aside from the lack of beverages, the graffiti in our bathroom and the standing on our bar it went OK. We really should try it again (how about someone else's house). To contact TKE for any good deeds we can do call 543-1492 and you'll be talked to by someone who really cares for you.

Well, we'd better cut it off here now. We don't want to run over. Until next week. Thanx for nothin' - TKE.

P.S. Bill "Presidente" Burkhardt wants to send his special thanks to the considerate ladies of AST for their thoughtfulness. Also, I want to send my own thanks to Eric M. for his much appreciated help with "My Program".

Nutter's Crossing on the morn of Sat., Apr. 30. Following this grand championship, all will be brought together that evening for a good time at the Fenwick on 139 St.

MO MONEY, MO MONEY! Thanks to the Zpecial ZTA Zweethearts for really showing us how the mere act of money can affect so many lives! Put your $ where your mouth is (or is it the other way around?)!

Finally, this is to our pledges... the water sure is cold at 5 am.

We're back this week after a quite noticeable absence. Apologies to any and all who may have been hurt, but that's life you know.

Anyway there's not much going on this week, but the most exciting news of all certainly must be the arrival of Four New Brothers! Welcome aboard Randy "Squigg" Ricker, Matt "Jim Radar" Dwyer, Tivis "Fluffy Bunny
